SERVICE CLUBS GROUP

Annual Meeting of Clubs of Bristol and Burlington Takes Place

In a stirring message to members of the service clubs of Burlington and Bristol, William S. Livengood, Jr., Pennsylvania's silver-tongued GOP Secretary of Internal Affairs, pleaded for the restoration of the government to the people when he spoke at the annual meeting of the clubs in commemoration of the opening of the Burlington-Bristol Bridge at the Philco plant in Croydon last evening. There were 125 present.

"Nationalization is inevitably national suicide, and the power of the people once surrendered to a central government never comes back except with human misery and bloodshed," Livengood said.

"We must defend our liberties, and above all others we must defend our political liberty, because when we lose this liberty we lose all of the others."

"We need less power on the superficial plane of those men who think they are destined to rule the lives of everyone. We need more power with the people."

"The spirit of good fellowship, fraternization and voluntary cooperation evidenced in service club groups such as yours is a spirit to be caught up by the whole world. Service clubs have grown rapidly and have come to fill a very important part in this country, and they can go a long way in settling the ills of the world."

"If the spirit exemplified by clubs such as yours could be transposed into the halls of the legislature at Harrisburg, at Trenton, at Washington, in the United Nations Assembly, then we would eliminate the evils prevalent in the world today."

"We must forget class legislation. We must not give power to the few. We must set as our goals the program which meets out good to the general citizenry."

"We must have a minimum of government and a minimum of government regulation. We see all too well what has happened in England with her nationalization program. The government there owns more of everything, but the people today have less than they had even in the darkest war years."

"We must have private enterprise and personal initiative. It is the struggle that makes men strong. It was this same struggle that made America the greatest country in the world."

"If we fail in this challenge of the restoration of the government to the people we will have the same situation as today exists abroad. A few years ago Hitler was the master of millions, but with his defeat the little peoples did not become free. They simply became the slaves of a new master—Russia."

A PERTINENT QUESTION

The purpose of the United Nations was to bring order in the world and to serve as the body through which peace could be established and maintained. All efforts along those lines have been circumscribed because of the negative attitude of Russia, and the power of that nation to veto action looking toward the end of war.

Until war started in Palestine, peace was being considered largely in the abstract. The trouble there gave the United Nations a specific problem to meet. The first move to that end was to call for a truce, that fighting come to an end while an effort was being made to bring peace through negotiations.

The Arabs sent word they would agree to an armistice only if the enemy was disarmed and the plan to partition Palestine was abandoned. They refused to recognize the authority of the United Nations to have a voice in the matter. Meanwhile, London is sponsoring the Arabs, while this nation is found on the other side. It is of such confusion that war is made.

A question pertinent at the moment is this: If the United Nations, presumably representing all the powers in the world, cannot bring an end to what is in fact a local war, how can it bring world peace? It may be true that men want peace but few, through their various governments, are willing to do the things which make for peace. Nor will there be peace so long as the world continues to be geared for war.

Although all possible emergency relief action has been taken, there is not much that can be done immediately in the face of a disaster of the magnitude of the floods in Oregon and Washington. Refugees are being fed and quarters of a sort are provided, but an estimated 100,000 are homeless and loss is estimated at more than $100,000,000.

Obviously for many thousands who escaped with their lives these floods are a catastrophe. Homes and all possessions washed away or ruined, farms inundated, occupations at least temporarily disrupted, many thousands of these flood victims will find life hard in the days ahead.

Attributed to unseasonably warm weather, with resultant rapid melting of snow in the mountains, the Oregon-Washington floods of this year will go down in history among the nation's worst. Now that the waters have started to recede, the task of rehabilitation is beginning. To repair $100,000,000 in flood damage is a gigantic job.

But for many of the victims of the flood years of effort will be required to recoup losses inflicted in hours or minutes by rampaging waters.

A PERTINENT QUESTION

The purpose of the United Nations was to bring order in the world and to serve as the body through which peace could be established and maintained. All efforts along those lines have been circumscribed because of the negative attitude of Russia, and the power of that nation to veto action looking toward the end of war.

Until war started in Palestine, peace was being considered largely in the abstract. The trouble there gave the United Nations a specific problem to meet. The first move to that end was to call for a truce, that fighting come to an end while an effort was being made to bring peace through negotiations.

The Arabs sent word they would agree to an armistice only if the enemy was disarmed and the plan to partition Palestine was abandoned. They refused to recognize the authority of the United Nations to have a voice in the matter. Meanwhile, London is sponsoring the Arabs, while this nation is found on the other side.
It is of such situations that war is made.

A question pertinent at the moment is this: If the United Nations, presumably representing all the powers in the world, cannot bring an end to what is in fact a local war, how can it bring world peace? It may be true that men want peace but few, through their various governments, are willing to do the things which make for peace. Nor will there be peace so long as the world continues to be geared for war.

CATASTROPHE

Although all possible emergency relief action has been taken, there is not much that can be done immediately in the face of a disaster of the magnitude of the floods in Oregon and Washington. Refugees are being fed and quarters of a sort are provided, but an estimated 100,000 are homeless and loss is estimated at more than $100,000,000.

Obviously for many thousands who escaped with their lives these floods are a catastrophe. Homes and all possessions washed away or ruined, farms inundated, occupations at least temporarily disrupted, many thousands of these flood victims will find life hard in the days ahead.

Attributed to unseasonably warm weather, with resultant rapid melting of snow in the mountains, the Oregon-Washington floods of this year will go down in history among the nation's worst. Now that the waters have started to recede, the task of rehabilitation is beginning.
To repair $100,000,000 in floor damage is a gigantic job.

But for many of the victims of the flood years of effort will be required to recoup losses inflicted in hours or minutes by rampaging waters.

Kansas wheat crop is expected to be only half that of 1947, but the state's airplane output will be larger. Boeing's big plant at Wichita is being reactivated.

District Attorney Blester in his rebuttal remarks and the last speech to the jury before Judge Boyer's charge, answered the defense attorneys.

There is also a history of Bucks County Firemen's Association, and a history of each of the five fire companies of Bristol. A list of Bristol churches and the hours of their services is also given; as well as a history of the Bucks County Fire Squad, illustrated with photographs of some of the squad's equipment. There is, in addition, a history of the Bucks County Fire Police Association. The balance of the book is composed of attractive advertisements of merchants and firms in this area who are supporting the firemen in this great effort.

The firemen look for a big demand for their programs during this week-end, and appeal to the public to make every effort to obtain a copy at the reasonable price which has been fixed. The programs are also on sale in the various fire stations throughout Bristol.
